

The Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
I. To a Father, against putting a Youth of but moderate Parts to a Profession that requires more extensive Abilities -	1
II. From an Uncle to a Nephew, on his keeping bad Company, bad Hours, &c. in his Apprenticeship - - -	4
III. From a Widow-Mother, in Answer to her Son's complain- ing of Hardships in his Apprenticeship - - -	8
IV. From an Uncle to the Youth, on the same Occasion -	9
V. From an Apprentice to an Uncle, about a Fraud committed by his Fellow-Apprentice - - - -	10
VI. The Uncle's Answer - - - -	11
VII. Advice from a Father to a young Beginner, what Company to choose, and how to behave in it - - -	12
VIII. General Rules for agreeable Conversation in a young Man. From a Father to a Son - - -	14
IX. An elder to a younger Brother, who is in Love with a young Lady of great Gaiety, &c. - - - -	16
X. An elder to an extravagant younger Brother - - -	18
XI. To a young Man too soon keeping a Horse - - -	20
XII. Against a sudden Intimacy, or Friendship, with one of a short Acquaintance - - - - -	22
XIII. A young Man in Business, to a Father, desiring Leave to address his Daughter - - - - -	23
XIV. To the Daughter (on the Father's Allowance), apprising her of his intended Visit - - - - -	24
XV. From a young Lady to her Father, acquainting him with a Proposal of Marriage made to her - - -	25
XVI. The Father's Answer, on a Supposition, that he approves not of the young Man's Addresses - - - -	26

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
XVII. The Father's Answer, on a Supposition, that he does not disapprove of them - - - - -	26
XVIII. The young Gentleman to the Father, apprising him of his Affection for his Daughter - - - - -	27
XIX. From the Cousin to the Father and Mother, in Commendation of the young Gentleman - - - - -	29
XX. From the Father, in Answer to the young Gentleman -	29
XXI. From the young Gentleman to his Mistress, on her Arrival at her Father's - - - - -	31
XXII. From a Brother to his Sister in the Country, upbraiding her for being negligent in Writing - - - - -	33
XXIII. In Answer to the preceding - - - - -	33
XXIV. From the Daughter to her Mother, in Excuse for her Neglect - - - - -	34
XXV. From a Son-in-law to his Wife's Father, acquainting him with his Wife's Illness - - - - -	35
XXVI. From a Country Chapman beginning Trade, to a City Dealer, offering his Correspondence - - - - -	35
XXVII. An Answer to the foregoing - - - - -	36
XXVIII. From a Maid-servant in Town, acquainting her Father and Mother in the Country with a Proposal of Marriage, and asking their Consents - - - - -	36
XXIX. From the Parents, in Answer to the preceding -	37
XXX. From the same, acquainting her Parents with her Marriage - - - - -	38
XXXI. Recommending a superior Man-servant - - - - -	38
XXXII. Recommending a Wet-nurse - - - - -	39
XXXIII. Recommending a Cook-maid - - - - -	39
XXXIV. Recommending a Chamber-maid - - - - -	40
XXXV. Recommending a Nursery-maid - - - - -	40
XXXVI. A Father to a Son, to dissuade him from the Vice of drinking to Excess - - - - -	41
XXXVII. The same Subject pursued - - - - -	43
XXXVIII. From an Apprentice to his Master, begging Forgiveness for a great Misdemeanour - - - - -	45

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
XXXIX. The Master's Answer - - - -	45
XL. From an Apprentice to his Friends, in Praise of his Master and Family - - - -	46
XLI. Another from an Apprentice, where the Master is too remiss in his own Affairs - - - -	47
XLII. To a Country Correspondent, modestly requesting a Balance of Accounts between them - - - -	48
XLIII. In Answer to the preceding - - - -	48
XLIV. A more pressing and angry Letter from a City Dealer on the same Account - - - -	49
XLV. In Answer to the preceding - - - -	50
XLVI. To a young Trader generally in a Hurry in Business, advising Method as well as Diligence - - - -	50
XLVII. From a Son reduced by his own Extravagance, request- ing his Father's Advice, on his Intention to turn Player -	53
XLVIII. The Father's Answer, setting forth the Incon- veniences and Disgrace attending the Profession of a Player	54
XLIX. To a Brother too captious to bear himself the Ridicule he practises upon others - - - -	55
L. To a Friend on his Recovery from a dangerous Illness -	57
LI. On the same Occasion - - - -	57
LII. In Answer to the preceding - - - -	58
LIII. To a young Lady, advising her not to change her Guardians, nor to encourage any clandestine Address -	58
LIV. From a Mother to a Daughter, jealous of her Husband -	60
LV. The Subject continued - - - -	62
LVI. From a tender Father to an ungracious Son - -	64
LVII. The Son's dutiful Answer - - - -	67
LVIII. To a Friend, on Occasion of his not answering his Letters - - - -	69
LIX. In Answer to the preceding - - - -	69
LX. From a Father to his Son, on his Negligence in his Affairs	70
LXI. The Son's grateful Answer - - - -	71

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
LXII. A young Woman in Town to her Sister in the Country, recounting her narrow Escape from a Snare laid for her, on her first Arrival, by a wicked Procuress - -	72
LXIII. To a Daughter in a Country Town, who encourages the Address of a Subaltern (A Case too frequent in Country Towns) - - - - -	76
LXIV. Expostulations from a grave Friend to a young Man, on his slighting and irreverent Behaviour to his Father -	78
LXV. Against too great a Love of Singing and Music -	82
LXVI. From a Daughter to her Father, pleading for her Sister, who had married without his Consent - - -	84
LXVII. The Father's Answer - - - -	85
LXVIII. To a Brother, against making his Wife and Children the constant Subject of Praise in Conversation - -	86
LXIX. From a Father to a Daughter, in Dislike of her Intentions to marry at too early an Age - - - -	88
LXX. From a Father to a Daughter, against a frothy French Lover - - - - -	89
LXXI. A modest Lover, desiring an Aunt's Favour to her Niece - - - - -	91
LXXII. The Aunt's Answer, supposing the Gentleman deserves Encouragement - - - - -	91
LXXIII. The Answer, supposing the Gentleman is not approved - - - - -	92
LXXIV. From a respectful Lover to his Mistress - -	93
LXXV. The Answer - - - - -	94
LXXVI. A humorous Epistle of neighbourly Occurrences and News, to a Bottle-Companion abroad - - -	94
LXXVII. From a Nephew to his Aunt, on his slow Progress in a Courtship Affair - - - - -	98
LXXVIII. The Aunt's Answer, encouraging him to persevere	100
LXXIX. A Gentleman to a Lady, professing an Aversion to the tedious Forms of Courtship - - - -	101
LXXX. The Lady's Answer, encouraging a farther Declaration	102

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
LXXXI. The Gentleman's Reply, more explicitly avowing his Passion - - - - -	102
LXXXII. The Lady's Answer to his Reply, putting the Matter on a sudden Issue - - - - -	103
LXXXIII. A facetious young Lady to her Aunt, ridiculing her serious Lover - - - - -	104
LXXXIV. Her Aunt's Answer, reprehending her ludicrous Turn of Mind - - - - -	106
LXXXV. From a Gentleman to his Mistress, resenting her supposed Coquetry - - - - -	108
LXXXVI. The Lady's angry Answer - - - - -	109
LXXXVII. The Gentleman's submissive Reply - - - - -	110
LXXXVIII. The Lady's forgiving Return - - - - -	111
LXXXIX. Ridiculing a romantic Rhapsody in Courtship - - - - -	111
XC. Against a young Lady's affecting manly Airs; and also censuring the modern Riding-habits - - - - -	113
XCI. A Father to a Daughter, relating to three Persons of different Characters proposed to him, each for her Husband; with his Recommendation of one in Years - - - - -	114
XCII. Her Answer, dutifully expostulating on the Case - - - - -	117
XCIII. His Reply, urgently enforcing, but not compelling, her Compliance with his Desire - - - - -	118
XCIV. To a rich Widow Lady with Children, dissuading her from marrying a Widower of meaner Degree, who has Children also - - - - -	120
Instructions to young Orphan Ladies, as well as others, how to judge of Proposals of Marriage made to them without their Guardians or Friends Consent, by their Milaners, Manteau makers, and other Go-betweens - - - - -	124
XCV. From the young Lady, to the clandestine Proposer of the Match - - - - -	128
XCVI. To a young Fellow who makes Love in a romantic manner. By the Hand of a Friend - - - - -	129
XCVII. Another less affronting on the same Occasion - - - - -	130
XCVIII. Another still less severe, but not encouraging - - - - -	130

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
XCIX. To rebuke an irregular Address, when it is not thought proper wholly to discourage it - - - - -	131
C. Another for a Lady referring to a Guardian, or chosen Friend - - - - -	131
CI. Another to the same Purpose - - - - -	132
CII. From a Town Tenant to his Landlord, excusing Delay of Payment - - - - -	132
CIII. From a Country Tenant to the same Purpose - - - - -	132
CIV. The Landlord's Answer - - - - -	133
CV. A threatening Letter from a Steward on Delay of Payment - - - - -	133
CVI. The poor Tenant's moving Answer - - - - -	134
CVII. The Steward's Reply, giving more Time - - - - -	135
CVIII. The poor Man's thankful Letter in Return - - - - -	135
CIX. An Offer of Assistance to a Friend, who has received great Losses by a Person's Failure - - - - -	136
CX. The Friend's Answer, accepting the kind Offer - - - - -	137
CXI. The Friend's Answer, supposing he has no Occasion for the Offer - - - - -	137
CXII. Of Consolation to a Friend in Prison for Debt - - - - -	138
CXIII. In Answer to the preceding - - - - -	139
CXIV. To a Person of Note, in Acknowledgement of great Benefits received - - - - -	140
CXV. Another for Favours of not so high, yet a generous Nature - - - - -	141
CXVI. An Excuse to a Person who wants to borrow Money - - - - -	141
CXVII. On the same Subject - - - - -	142
CXVIII. Another on the same - - - - -	142
CXIX. To a Friend, in Compliance with his Request to borrow a Sum of Money - - - - -	142
CXX. Another on the same Occasion, limiting the Payment to a certain Time - - - - -	143
CXXI. To a Friend, on a Breach of Promise in not returning Money lent in his Exigence - - - - -	143

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
CXXII. To a Friend, who had promised to lend a Sum of Money, to answer a critical Exigence, and drove it off to the last - - - - -	144
CXXIII. The Answer, excusing the Pain he had given his Friend by his Remissness - - - - -	145
CXXIV. To one who, upon a very short Acquaintance, and without any visible Merit, but Assurance, wants to borrow a Sum of Money - - - - -	145
CXXV. A Gentleman to a Lady, who humourously resents his Mistress's Fondness of a Monkey, and Indifference to himself - - - - -	146
CXXVI. A Sailor to his betrothed Mistress - - - - -	147
CXXVII. Her Answer - - - - -	149
CXXVIII. A Sea Officer to his Wife - - - - -	150
CXXIX. A Wife to her Husband at Sea - - - - -	151
CXXX. To a Father, on his Neglect of his Children's Education - - - - -	152
CXXXI. From a young Maiden, abandoned by her Lover for the sake of a greater Fortune - - - - -	155
CXXXII. From a Gentleman to his Mistress, who, seeing no Hopes of Success, respectfully withdraws his Suit - - - - -	157
CXXXIII. From a Lady to a Gentleman, who had obtained all her Friends Consent, urging him to decline his Suit to her - - - - -	158
CXXXIV. The Gentleman's Answer to the Lady's uncommon Request - - - - -	160
CXXXV. The Lady's Reply, in case of a Prepossession - - - - -	161
CXXXVI. The Lady's Reply in case of no Prepossession, or that she chooses not to avow it - - - - -	162
CXXXVII. A Lady to a Gentleman of superior Fortune, who, after a long Address in an honourable way, proposes to live with her as a Gallant - - - - -	162
CXXXVIII. A Father to a Daughter in Service, on hearing of her Master's attempting her Virtue - - - - -	164
xxxvii

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
CXXXIX. The Daughter's Answer - - -	165
CXL. To a Gentleman of Fortune, who has Children, dissuading him from a Second Marriage with a Lady much younger than himself - - -	165
CXLI. The same Subject pursued - - -	168
CXLII. Against a Second Marriage, where there are Children on both Sides - - -	171
CXLIII. Against a Second Marriage, where there are Children on one Side, and a Likelihood of more - - -	175
CXLIV. Advising a Friend against going to Law - - -	179
CXLV. To a young Lady, cautioning her against keeping Company with a Gentleman of bad Character - - -	182
CXLVI. From a Mother to her high-spirited Daughter, who lives on uneasy Terms with her Husband - - -	183
CXLVII. A Lady to her Friend, a young Widow Lady, who, having buried a polite and excellent Husband, inclines to marry a less deserving Gentleman, and of unequal Fortune - - -	187
CXLVIII. From a Gentleman, strenuously expostulating with an old rich Widow, about to marry a very young gay Gentleman - - -	190
CXLIX. From a young Lady in Town to her Aunt in the Country. 1. Describing the Tower, Monument, St. Paul's, &c. - - -	193
CL. 2. Describing other remarkable Places in and about London and Westminster, which are generally shewn to Strangers - - -	195
CLI. 3. Describing Chelsea Hospital, and Kensington Palace - - -	197
CLII. 4. Describing Greenwich Park, and the Passage to it by Water - - -	199
CLIII. 5. Describing Bethlehem Hospital - - -	200
CLIV. 6. Diversions of Vaux-hall described - - -	202
CLV. 7. An Account of Westminster-Abbey - - -	205

Contents of the Letters

LETTER	PAGE
CLVI. 8. Account of Westminster-Abbey continued -	208
CLVII. 9. On a Concert, or Musical Entertainment -	212
CLVIII. 10. On the Diversions of the Playhouse -	213
CLIX. 11. The Play, and the low Scenes of Harlequinery after it described and exposed - - -	215
CLX. From a Country Gentleman in Town, to his Brother in the Country, describing a public Execution in London -	217
Five Letters which passed between an Aunt and her Niece, in relation to her Conduct in the Addresses made her by two Gentlemen; one a gay fluttering military Coxcomb, the other a Man of Sense and Honour - - -	220
CLXI. 1. From the Aunt to the Niece, desiring her Niece's own Opinion of the two Lovers - - -	220
CLXII. 2. The Niece's Answer: Describing the Behaviour of the sensible Lover - - -	221
CLXIII. 3. Continuing the Description of the Behaviour of the same Gentleman; which occasions a Love-quarrel -	223
CLXIV. 4. From the same: Describing her fluttering Pre- tender - - -	225
CLXV. 5. From the Aunt, containing solid Advice and Cautions on this Occasion - - -	227
CLXVI. From a Lady to her false Lover, who, after having braved all his Friends Expostulations, at last is persuaded to abandon her for another of larger Fortune - -	230
CLXVII. From a Gentleman to his Lady, whose Over-niceness in her House, and uneasy Temper with her Servants, makes their Lives uncomfortable - - -	232
CLXVIII. From a Gentleman who in a small Fortune exper- iences the Slights of his Friends; but, being suddenly reputed to be rich, is oppressed with the fawning Caresses and Adulation of those who had before neglected him -	235
CLXIX. From one Brother to another, on the rash Marriage of a beloved Daughter of one of them to a profligate young Fellow - - -	238